PARADISE CORNER

I am currently in my second used car in fourteen years. This is in spite of the fact that I never previously bought used cars. The policy I followed came from my parents. They insisted that to buy a used car was “to buy someone else’s problems.” Then, a neighbor who was also a member of the congregation I served sold used cars. He knew I was looking for a car and called me when a vehicle I “wouldn’t believe” came in on the carrier. He was looking out for my wellbeing. I trusted him. The experience of buying that first used car was good. I drove that car for thirteen years. Since then, I have had conversations with people who say things like, “I only buy used cars” and wonder what took me so long. Their logic, as I understand it, often lines up with all of the bugs being “worked out” and the vehicle being “broken in.” Experience, along with care and trust, are things we frequently bring to our decision making.

When someone notices my car (both of which I think have been pretty sharp looking) and describes it as “new,” the more accurate response is to describe the car as “new to me.” I want this article to be about how I have engaged both my personal practice (which I changed regarding used cars) and about my relationship with a much larger community (lots of people buy only used cars). I believe the “new to me” response is helpful in understanding this in many places—even in the life of the church.

For example, during the Sundays in Lent, our adult Sunday School class used a video series purchased by, but unused by Eddie Wolf before he died. One of the lessons (not the first one) asked us to sing a hymn related to the lesson’s theme. Although the hymn was one I knew, it was not one our congregation uses. (It isn’t in either of our hymnals.) Instead of us singing (badly if I had anything to do with it), I played the hymn and we followed along. The class loved the hymn and described it as “easy to sing.” My point here is that the hymn was not new. (It was from 1719, so over three hundred years old, hardly “right off the showroom floor.”) Yet, the hymn was “new to us.” I was happy when the class asked if we could sing it in worship some Sunday, which I am working with our music leaders to do.

A good way of expressing our faith is to engage in experiences like this. The fact that this particular hymn has lasted over three hundred years means it is both “used” (quite extensively!) and also “broken in.” Other Christian worshipers, who wanted to be as faithful as we do, found the hymn meaningful and used it over and over. (As the used car comparison, would say, “they put a lot of miles on it.”) if something has served the faithful so well over the centuries, we can make the case clearly that it might also be helpful to us. “New” sometimes simply means “new to us.”

Being able to incorporate new practices into our existing spiritual practices is a way to grow in faith and life. Realizing that others have claimed the same faith as us for longer than we have helps us remember what we are part of something larger. Or, to put it in a future-oriented way, the place we are isn’t the place we need to stay. Many have gone before us to show us how to use old things in new ways. They have broken in the gifts and invited us to make them even more used than they already were. We can go to new places in our talk of God knowing that even the “old” can be “new” again and celebrating the church’s way of making that happen.

Live as children of light!
Pastor Scott Paradise

Hello Millcreek Family,

I just wanted to say thank you to the congregation for the Subway gift card and fun submarine craft! I really appreciate you thinking of me. There is a Subway right on the corner of my campus, so it's very convenient for me. Thanks again, Abbie Keath

Dear MLC,

Thank you for the Subway gift card and thinking of me at Shippensburg. Your gift was so generous. Every time I go to Subway I will think of our church family. Thank you again! Devon Rosengrant

Dear Millcreek Family,

Thank you for the care package and reminder that I have a much larger family to come back to than I realize. In the package, there were two crafts, so my roommate and I put them together after a long day of class. While putting them together we realized that I have the album Yellow Submarine, by the Beatles, on vinyl. Attached to this email is an image of both of our yellow submarines and the album on our record player in our dorm room.

Can't wait to be back, Aidan H.

The foam submarine puzzle was included in the mailing of the Subway gift cards to each college student. Cole and Aidan put their crafty talent to work and included a photo of the finished sub with their thank you!

Spring Gardening Humor

A pastor went out one Saturday to visit his church members. At one house, it was obvious that someone was home, but nobody came to the door even though the pastor knocked several times. Finally, the pastor took out his business card, wrote "Revelation 3:20" on the back of it, and stuck it in the door.

Behold, I stand at the door and knock. If anyone hears my voice and opens the door, I will come in to him and dine with him, and he with me. – Revelation 3:20

The next day, the same business card turned up in the collection plate. Below the pastor's message of "Revelation 3:20" was written "Genesis 3:10"..... "I heard you in the garden, and I was afraid because I was naked; so I hid."
